

Testimony - June 2006

A New Workforce for New York: How the City Can Replace Thousands of Retiring Baby Boomers

At a City Council hearing prompted by the Center's May 2006 report, "Chance of a Lifetime," project director David Jason Fischer testified about what the city must do to prepare at-risk young New Yorkers for the world of work, and the value of a youth-focused workforce intermediary to rationalize and coordinate these efforts.

by David Jason Fischer

Click here to read the testimony \(PDF\).

RELATED PRESS

How Will the Threat of Vehicular Terrorism Change Our Cities?

Architectural Digest, by Guelda Voien , November 14, 2017