Data from Re-Envisioning New York’s Branch Libraries

Charts and tables from our Re-Envisioning New York’s Branch Libraries report which found that while more New Yorkers than ever are using the city’s public libraries, a significant share of the branches suffer from major physical defects and are poorly configured for how New Yorkers are using libraries today. The report provides a comprehensive blueprint for bringing these vital community institutions into the 21st Century.
RELATED PRESS

Report: City libraries on verge of ‘maintenance crisis’

Capital New York, by Dana Rubinstein , September 15, 2014

Trustees Endorse Plan to Sell Land Beneath Branch of Brooklyn Library

$525-a-Month Studios Proposed for Redevelopment of Sunset Park Library
DNAinfo, by Nikhita Venugopal, November 03, 2014

5 Design Concepts for New York’s Branch Library of the Future

City Lab, by Eric Jaffe, December 05, 2014

Architects Propose Redesigns Of Sheepshead Bay, Coney Island And Brighton Libraries

Sheepshead Bites, by Heather J. Chin, December 29, 2014

Report: NYC Public Libraries In Poor Physical Shape

CBS New York, March 20, 2015

Public Libraries Need Over $1 Billion in Repairs, Report Says

Curbed, by Jeremiah Budin, September 15, 2014

Are NYC’s Public Libraries Falling Down?

WNYC’s The Brian Lehrer Show, September 15, 2014

Harlem’s 125th St. Library reopens its doors after a year of renovations

Vital Community Hubs, Libraries Toil Underfunded

Gotham Gazette, by Kristin Meriwether, December 09, 2014

Editorial: De Blasio’s Opportunity: It’s time to reinvest in NYC’s branch libraries

Library Journal, by Rebecca T. Miller, January 06, 2015

Queens Library seeks public funding

New report says Queens Library buildings need more room to keep up with a growing number of customers

Center for an Urban Future Re-Envisions New York’s Branch Libraries

Library Journal, by Lisa Peet, September 19, 2014

Report praises Cuyahoga County Library System

The News Herald, by Andrew Cass and Kaylee Remington, November 20, 2014

Make New York City’s Libraries a Higher Priority

Huffington Post, by Julie Sandorf, December 11, 2014

Evolution for Libraries in Brooklyn
NYC Libraries Are Falling Apart

After new report, councilman calls for unification of city libraries

Editorial: Fix the funding for our aging public libraries

Two Harlem Libraries Close for Floor Repairs

New report says aged Bronx libraries need more repairs and renovations to keep up with the times

More space needed in Queens libraries

De Blasio’s time to lead on libraries

Modern Public Libraries Might Help Renters Afford NYC

$1B to modernize and repair NYC’s libraries: research

Staten Island’s aging libraries need $50.44M in capital funding, report finds

Group Demands Real Estate Info From Brooklyn Public Library

City Seizes Brooklyn Library Building
Imagining the Design of the Library That Does Everything

Libraries report outlines maintenance crisis

Price tag to repair City’s libraries? $1.1B, report says

Repairs Needed at New York City Library Branches

Help honor Queens libraries for their crucial work with an award!

Designers Draw up the Library of the Future

Report: New York Public Libraries in Dismal Shape

Queens Library struggling from space constraints, report says

NY1 Online: Experts Weigh In on Issues Facing City’s Library Systems

New chapter in library building could spell success for de Blasio

Amid multiple reviews, Council considers libraries commission

Report: Crumbling NYC libraries need massive investment

New York City Public Library Branches Need $1.1 Billion in Repairs: Report

NYC Libraries Need $1.1 Billion for Repairs, Says Report