Center for an Urban Future

Innovative Ideas. Independent Policy.

Report - June 2009

Record Recovery

This new report concludes that the health IT sector is one of New York City's best bets for reigniting and diversifying the city's economy. It argues that with the right local economic development strategy, the federal government's unprecedented $19.2 billion investment in electronic health records could create thousands of long-term jobs in New York City and make the city a leading hub for the health IT sector.

by David Giles

Click here to read the full report (PDF).

RELATED PRESS

Study sees New York City as coming HIT hub

Government Health IT, July 01, 2009

10 Best Places for Tech Jobs

U.S. News & World Report, by Liz Wolgemuth, September 15, 2009

How Health Records Could Promote Job Growth

New York Times City Room Blog, by Patrick McGeehan, June 29, 2009

Study: NYC's health-tech sector holds promise

Crain's New York Business, by Kara Bindrim, June 29, 2009

Report: New York poised to be healthcare IT hub

Healthcare IT News, by Molly Merrill, June 30, 2009

New Study: Health IT Sector Could Be Key to Boosting City's Economy

New York Observer/New York Future Initiative, by Joe Pompeo, June 30, 2009

NYC Could Be Hub for Nationwide Health IT Expansion, Study Says

iHealthBeat, June 30, 2009

CENTER FOR AN URBAN FUTURE
120 Wall Street, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10005

cuf@nycfuture.org © All Rights Reserved.